Two Brothers, One Ultramarathon, and the Greatest Cheat in Running History

The Comrades Marathon is one of the oldest and 1. most famous ultramarathons in the world. It takes place in South Africa. The 2. race goes from Durban to Pietermaritzburg, along a 90-kilometer rough coastal road. It's a rather 3. popular event as around 23,000 runners take part every year.

Most runners need 11 to 12 hours to finish the race, while the 4. fastest athletes can do it in less than six hours. Runners 5. who cannot finish within 12 hours are "swept up by the broom wagon," meaning they are taken away in rescue cars.

People join the marathon for different reasons. Some run to raise money for charity, while others want glory. 6. However, some runners do it because they are in serious need of cash. Top runners can win thousands of dollars depending on their results.

Like many big sports events, the race has had problems with cheating. One of the most famous cases involved a runner named Sergio Motsoeneng. In 1999, he finished eighth in the marathon and won a medal and 7. prize money.

However, something seemed suspicious when a local newspaper published photos 8. that showed something unusual. In one photo, Sergio wore his watch on his left wrist, and in another, it was on his right wrist. He had also suddenly grown a scar on his left leg.

Soon, the truth came out. Sergio had an identical twin brother named Fika. 9. During the race, Sergio secretly met his brother and gave him his clothes and number. Fika then continued the race in his place. In this way, the brothers shared the race.

When the truth was discovered, both brothers lost the money they had won and were 10. banned from racing for several years. They said they cheated because they really needed money.
