Passage 1

Chocolate town for chocolate workers

If you love chocolate, maybe you have eaten a bar of Cadbury's Bournville chocolate. But Bournville isn't just the name of an English chocolate bar. It's the name of a village which was built especially for workers at the Cadbury's chocolate factory. George and Richard Cadbury took over the cocoa and chocolate business from their father in 1861. A few years later, they decided to move the factory out of the centre of Birmingham, a city in the middle of England, to a new location where they could expand. They chose an area close to the railways and canals so that they could receive milk deliveries easily and send the finished products to stores across the country.

Here, the air was much cleaner than in the city centre, and the Cadbury brothers thought it would be a much healthier place for their employees to work. They named the site Bournville after a local river called 'The Bourn'. 'Ville', the French word for town, was used because at the time, people thought French chocolate was the highest quality. The new factory opened in 1879. Close to it, they built a village where the factory workers could live. By 1900, there were 313 houses on the site, and many more were built later.

The Cadbury family were religious and believed that it was right to help other people. They thought their workers deserved to live and work in good conditions. In the factory, workers were given a fair wage, a pension and access to medical treatment. The village was also designed to provide the best possible conditions for workers too. The houses, although traditional in style, had modern interiors, indoor bathrooms and large gardens. The village provided everything that workers needed including a shop, a school and a community centre where evening classes were held to train young members of the workforce.

Since the Cadbury family believed that their workers and their families should be fit and healthy, they added a park with hockey and football pitches, a running track, a bowling green, a fishing lake, and an outdoor swimming pool. A large clubhouse was built in the park so that players could change their clothes and relax after a game. Dances and dinners were also held here for the factory workers, who were never charged to use any of the sports facilities. However, because the Cadbury's believed that alcohol was bad for health and society, no pubs were ever built in Bourneville!

The Cadbury brothers were among the first business owners to ensure that their workers had good standards of living. Soon, other British factory owners were copying their ideas by providing homes and communities for their workers designed with convenience and health in mind. Today, over 25,000 people live in Bournville village. There are several facilities there to help people with special needs, such as care homes for the elderly, a hostel for people with learning difficulties and affordable homes for first-time homeowners and single people. Over a hundred years since the first house in Bournville Village was built, the aims of its founders are still carried out.

Passage 2

Restaurant Reviews

A Barry

We hardly ever eat out but since we had a long journey we decided to stop at the White Horse Inn for lunch. My wife ordered the lasagne and I ordered a steak and ale pie. We waited over thirty minutes for our food, and when my pie arrived, it was chicken and mushroom. When they brought the correct pie, I picked up the gravy and found that it was completely cold. When I went to the bar and asked for it to be heated and suggested that we should get a partial refund, the manager was very rude.

B Emma

We decided to visit the Amazing Mexican restaurant for our Sunday lunch. The prices were a bit high, but we thought it would be worth it if the food was good. Sadly, we were disappointed. The starter was not enough for everyone and the main course was so spicy we could not eat it. It certainly wasn't worth the money. The decoration was old-fashioned, the chairs were uncomfortable and the walls needed painting. On top of everything the waiter was so clumsy that he dropped the cutlery twice and spilt juice all over my friend.

C Bob

My old classmates and I decided to have our yearly reunion at Sushi Yummy so we booked a table for ten for Saturday night. We got a warm welcome from the manager and were impressed with the wide selection of starters and the big variety of dishes for main course. However, the main courses were mostly sushi and salmon, and not very adventurous or exotic, but it was decent, reasonably priced, warm and well presented. We were served quickly, considering there were ten of us, and the staff were polite.

D Sandy

The Big Zorba Tavern looked very attractive from the outside, with a large car park, disabled access and a charming garden. It's in a good location on the main road, and I imagine it attracts a lot of people. It is supposed to be a posh place and you should dress well to go there, but everyone was wearing jeans and T-shirts. If I was local to the area, I wouldn't come here regularly. The prices were reasonable but we didn't get very much for our money.

E Andrew

«We ended up at the Fish and Chips restaurant for our Sunday lunch when the place we planned to eat at had forgotten to note down our reservation. However, we felt very pleased about this mistake in the end. We were greeted by a friendly, helpful young lady. I ordered fish and chips and unexpectedly the fish was fresh and served in a lovely, crisp batter. The desserts were also delicious. However, for me, it was the excellent service and friendliness of all the staff that made the visit stand out.»
