TASK 5   (4x1=4 marks)

For each question, choose the correct answer.

The students below all want to choose an art course for their free time. On the opposite page, there are descriptions of five art courses. Decide which art course would be most suitable for each.

1. Jennifer is a student at Cyprus University, doing her Master's Degree which means she doesn't really have time to go to classes. She'd like to learn from an experienced art teacher who knows what he's doing and has excellent teaching skills. Being a student means there's not much money left for extra activities, so a free course would really suit her needs.

2. Roger wants to do a course which would allow him to learn side-by-side with his 8-year-old brother. He is currently thinking about a career change as he has always loved how animated characters magically come to life. Money is not an issue so long as he feels there is a place where he can get support as soon as he needs it.

3. Nikolas works as a doctor. He doesn't have a lot of free time for friends or many activities so he'd like to go to a class where he can meet like-minded people. He's never tried drawing before and wants to start easy. On busy days, he'd like to be able to have access to the lessons he has missed, even if he has to pay extra.

4. Kimiko has passion for drawing and animation movies featuring animals. She feels like she knows how to draw well but would like to develop a specific style in drawing, learning from a professional. She also loves giving her friends presents based on her hobby, especially made for them.

A. Sketchable.com

These online art courses cover every aspect of digital art, so that even a child can start learning on their tablet. If your future plans involve moving on to animation, then look no further than this website. There are many – somewhat expensive – online courses, and a forum allows questions which are answered quickly and accurately.

B. Mankeyart.com

No better place to start learning, than Jon Mankovic's online art studio. He has several awards under his belt and is currently teaching in the Californian University from which he graduated. He publishes an online video series where he teaches artists, from beginner to expert. All the videos are extremely high quality and, even better, there is no fee charged.

C. DigitAllPainter.com

This website uses a popular streaming platform and is recommended for those who want to learn how to create the beautiful worlds we see in video games. For a small monthly fee, subscribers get access to a library full of 3-hour-long video tutorials that can be downloaded, so making the task of watching them anywhere and anytime, a piece of cake.

D. Aaron's-Workshop.com

Aaron has been putting together characters for major animated films such as Pocahontas, Aladdin and The Lion King. His favourite designs are those of animals, so most videos available show visitors how to draw anything from a mouse to a rhinoceros. His website also has a gift shop with items custom-drawn by Aaron himself.

E. DaVinciWorld.net

If you believe that art is not your best skill, then look no further. James offers live classes for beginners where you can learn basic drawing techniques starting with how to hold a pencil, and make some friends along the way. For those who can't make all the classes, the website offers recordings on DVDs for a low price.

Task 6 (5x1= 5 marks)

For each question, choose the correct answer.

The Rosetta Project

There are currently 7000 spoken languages but at least 3000 tongues are endangered, seriously endangered or dying out in parts of the world. The Votian language, which is very close to the Estonian language, is about to become extinct because only 50 adult speakers know the language. Experts generally consider a community's language to be "endangered" when at least 30 per cent of its youngsters no longer learn it. As is the case with Votian, when no young people learn a language as their mother tongue, the language dies out.

Language extinction is a major concern for many experts and for this reason they have created a project called the 'Rosetta Project'. The project makes a digital record of all human languages in an effort to keep languages alive. This digital library will be a great tool for the future because it can help experts to recover lost languages. Another aim of the Rosetta Project is to help people find documents of long-gone languages and, why not even, rediscover them.

The Rosetta disk will have 13000 pages of information on over 1500 languages and it is considered as a journey between cultures and history. For each language there is going to be data on its people, writing systems, grammar and vocabulary. The project will make use of translated versions of texts into a number of languages to make sure no language will disappear with no evidence. There are going to be translated texts of endangered languages too.

The name Rosetta comes from the ancient 'Rosetta Stone' which was discovered in 1799 in Egypt, near the town of Rashid (Rosetta) in the Nile River Delta. The original Rosetta stone was a tablet written in hieroglyphic symbols and the Egyptian and Greek languages. Because Greek was well known, the stone was the key to reading the hieroglyphics and for this reason its discovery helped unlock the secrets of an ancient civilisation, bringing back to life a writing system which died out in the 4th century.

Unfortunately, people abandon their native language for many reasons. English, for example, is quickly becoming a universal language; it is the one language that is spoken and understood by the majority of the population in almost every region of the world and many scientific and business documents are written in English. This can easily make some dialects or languages disappear faster. For some, having fewer languages is better because we can have better communication. However, we should keep in mind that losing a language means losing a culture.
