Read the article about helpful travel tips and do TASK 3 below.

THINGS YOU SHOULD NOT DO WHEN TRAVELLING

Travelling can be a wonderful life experience, but to make the most of it, travellers should consider some important factors before leaving home.

Good travellers should respect the places they visit. They should know about the appropriate dress code, especially when visiting religious sites. Avoid asking the local people about historic events such as wars. What may be a fascinating topic to you could be painful for a local resident. It's also best to avoid criticising political or religious matters.

Besides respecting the people, a good traveller respects the place. Dropping food at historic and natural sites can cause pollution, so make sure your visit has as little negative impact as possible.

A good traveller is well-prepared in advance. Researching the history and culture of the destination country and even some of the language before you travel is a good idea. Try to learn some basic, essential words of the local vocabulary, especially for 'please', 'excuse me' and 'thank you'. English is an international language, but that doesn't mean you shouldn't make an effort.

Pre-travel checklist

It's always a good idea to visit your doctor before taking a trip in order to make sure you have any medicine you need, and to ask him/her any other questions you may have. Depending on what country you are going to, you may also want to get certain vaccinations.

Check the weather at your destination country in advance. This way, you will have no trouble deciding what pieces of clothing are necessary.

PASSAGE 2

Read Bill's story about hurricane Sandy and do TASK 4 below.

SURVIVING HURRICANE SANDY

In November 2012, Hurricane Sandy hit our house near New York. Until then, we felt that since we lived quite higher than the level of the sea, we were fairly safe. We have always made some preparations in case of such emergencies, but as it turned out we weren't prepared enough.

We knew the storm was coming quickly, and it was going to be severe. We had waterproof 'go-bags' filled with all the essential items and a tank full of water. Even our dog had his bag full of food and supplies in case of evacuation.

When the storm hit, the winds kept getting stronger. Trees were blown down and the circuit box exploded. Our daughter was watching the storm from her bedroom window when suddenly an enormous tree landed on the roof above her room. We all stayed away from the windows. We were shocked by the intensity of the hurricane and terrified at the same time. The children were frightened because the power was out.

When the storm was over, we had to assess the damage. Thankfully, no one was hurt. We cleared our driveway of trees. We checked on our neighbours and offered our help. We stayed indoors because the roads were dangerous. We didn't have running water, so we used the water in our tank.

After the storm passed, we made a list of the things we could have done better. Firstly, we made a plan in case we might not all be at home. We planned where we could meet and who we might call for information. We built a battery bank for backup power, and bought canned food. Some ten years later, we continue to improve our emergency preparations and plans.
