PART II: WRITING SKILLS

(30 MARKS)

You have recently received a smartphone from your friend Costas as a present for your birthday. Write an email to him

- to thank him for the present;
- to explain what you mostly use it for;
- to express your opinion about communication through social media.

Your email should be about 100 words.

PART III: READING SKILLS

(30 MARKS)

Read the passage below and answer ALL the questions that follow.

Why you should learn a second language

One of the most practical ways to make use of your spare time nowadays is to start learning a new skill. People who always succeed are those that are keen to learn something new every day, be it learning about other cultures or learning a second language. In this article, you will read about some benefits of learning a second language.

Why is it important to know more than one language?

We live in a multilingual world where connections are now more important than ever before. The world is becoming increasingly globalised. Being bilingual, that is knowing a second language, can always give you an advantage. There are tangible benefits to being bilingual:

- It can help you in your career;
- It can improve your memory and brain functions;
- It can help increase your understanding of your own language.

A second language can drastically change your career. Living in an interconnected world means that more and more jobs are advertising positions where knowing more than two languages is essential.

As more companies trade internationally and create relationships with other countries, employees are often asked to travel to those countries for work and enhance those relationships.

Besides having more chances of getting a good job or advancing in your career, learning a second language can also give you an insight into other cultures. You will be more prepared and confident to travel the world and explore other people's ways of living.

Lack of integration is a real problem for most countries. Not being able to speak the local language stops people from mixing with others. People outside of their home countries end up being isolated, hanging out only with people from their countries. Learning a second language opens up the opportunity for being part of a community with a different culture, and learning more about the world around us.

Being bilingual can also help you master your own language. Learning a new language with similar roots as your mother tongue enables you to gain a deeper insight into your own language. However, this is not the only benefit of learning a second language. So, let's have a look at some other benefits of learning a second language.

It improves your memory

The more you use your brain to learn new skills, the more your brain's functions work. Learning a new language pushes your brain to get familiar with new grammar and vocabulary rules. It allows you to train your memory to remember new words, make connections between them, and use them in appropriate situations.

It enhances your ability to multitask

Multitasking is a skill that will always help you. Multilingual people have the ability to switch between languages. Thinking in different languages and communicating in more than one language are skills that help with multitasking.

It improves your performance in other areas

Fully immersing yourself in a language learning environment means not only learning the basics of that language. It means learning how to communicate in another language with your peers or participating in extracurricular activities in that specific language.

Has technology killed our ability to talk face-to-face?

Nowadays, with Facetime, Skype, WhatsApp and Snapchat, face-to-face conversation is often used less and 1. (less / more / worse) by many people.

These apps allow us to converse 2. (about / with / for) each other quickly and easily, overcoming distances, time zones and countries. We can even talk to virtual assistants such as Alexa, Cortana or Siri, commanding them to play our favourite songs, films or tell us the 3. (climate / atmosphere / weather) forecast.

Often these 4. (sources / ways / origins) of communication reduce the need to speak to another human being. This has led to some of the conversations of our daily lives now taking 5. (apart / part / place) mainly via technological devices. So no longer do we need to talk with shop assistants, receptionists, bus drivers or even co-workers. We simply engage with a 6. (board / screen / panel) to communicate whatever it 7. (is / was / has been) we want to say.

In fact, in these scenarios, we tend to only speak to other people 8. (when / where / who) the digital technology does not operate successfully. For instance, human contact occurs when we call for an assistant to help us when an item is not recognised at the self-service checkout.

And when we have the ability to connect so quickly and easily with others using technological devices and software 9. (applications / machines / networks), it is easy to start to overlook the value 10. (from / of / off) face-to-face conversation. It seems easier to text someone rather than meet with them.

C. Complete the following passage by using the correct form of the word in brackets. (10x0.5=5 marks)

Whistled languages and a world champion whistler

Dozens of 1. traditional (TRADITION) cultures use a whistled form of their native language for long-distance 2. communication (COMMUNICATE).

Tourists who are 3. visiting (VISIT) La Gomera and El Hierro in the Canary Islands can often hear locals communicating over long distances by whistling not a tune, but the Spanish language. "Good whistlers can understand all the messages," says David Díaz Reyes, an ethnomusicologist and whistled-language 4. researcher (RESEARCH) and teacher who lives in the islands.

Whistled languages are almost always developed by cultures that live in 5. mountainous (MOUNTAIN) terrain or in dense forest. That's because whistled speech carries much farther than ordinary speaking or 6. shouting (SHOUT). Skilled whistlers can reach 120 decibels. This is 7. louder (LOUD) than a car horn.

A world champion whistler

Sean Lomax is a world champion whistler. He's been 8. whistling (WHISTLE) full-time since 2005 when he first took the role of circus ringmaster in Cirque du Soleil Corteo, and now performs at private events and on television. His advice for becoming a 9. better (GOOD) whistler than before: Eat a peach and practice, practice, practice.

Sean has worked with producers, 10. directors (DIRECT) and technicians to provide the required whistling intros which create that unique sound that only Sean can produce.
